Let's Talk About It

Sheriff Salazar investigation: Is it the right thing to do?

This grass roots publication is the life source for a community that is not easily afforded viable access to diverse and accessible media. San Antonio and the surrounding counties have become accustomed to relevant news brought to them in both English and Spanish since 1913.

Tonight, I received a call asking who the sheriff thought he was launching an investigation into the circumstances surrounding Gov. Ron DeSantis' choice to transport a group of migrants from San Antonio to Martha's Vineyard. The caller noted that our sheriff is a democrat and De Santis is a republican and this was the reason behind this investigation. "The Bexar County Sheriff's Office has opened an investigation into the migrants that were lured from the Migrant Resource Center, located in Bexar County, TX, and flown to Florida, where they were ultimately left to fend for themselves in Martha's Vineyard, MA," the Bexar County Sheriff's Office tweeted. Do you think that the Sheriff is doing this for political reasons or humane reasons? Does it matter? Let's talk about it... #letstalk-aboutit

Linda Grimes Holcomb: "Good job Sheriff! We need to stand up to these abuses of taxpayers resources & political stunts at the expense of vulnerable people! They were LEGALLY seeking refuge."

Lonnie Bradley: "I don't know what if anything the migrants were told, but then again I don't really care. They came here illegally and I would rather see them flown back where they came from. But it definitely smells like a political move, based on a political move to highlight an international problem at the border."

Luis Barrios: "BRAVO! for your opinion on CNN about legally employing those who came here for a better life, so that they pay taxes and contribute to the US economy!"

Frank Burton: "Yeah, could be kidnapping among other things. It was a douche-bag move but what can you expect with everything else they keep sprouting. They also spent about $11k per person to get them there. Who's pockets did the money go into?"

Todd Forbes: "The timing of this stinks to high heaven! If this was truly about human rights then we would have seen action long ago when the federal govt was transporting people in secret in the middle of the night- Come on folks! This has political written all over it- But the good news is that we now can see who the rats are! This country is on the wrong path and if you don't vote to change that path- Then you really don't care about America- MAGA is not tied to a political party- all Americans should be wearing that hat !!! Otherwise get a one way ticket to anywhere outside the US! I don't care where . Just go!"

Tina Rivera: "Asylum application is legal. Jesus! You people are ignorant of this country's laws."

Dawn Dixon West: "One of the best governors in the US! Gov. Ron Desantis cares about the American people and shows his compassion with all he does to serve the great state of Florida!"

Michelle Alt: "Thank you Sheriff Javier Salazar! You are upholding the law! People need to remember this and forget about all the politics, no matter what side they are on. What was done was inhumane, plain fact! If this was done to any other illegals from any other countries, people wouldn't feel this way. In fact, why don't anyone who has family immigrate from another country raise their hand! (A different time and place, I'm sure. Things were different and these people were just trying to do what was right by their families. Put yourself in their shoes for once). If people are Christians of any kind, I can't believe they would even consider being against you. There are over 100 verses alone speaking of helping our fellow man. 'Whoever oppresses a poor man insults his maker, but he who is generous to the needy honors him.' Again, good on you Sheriff, no matter what anyone says!"

Jennette Nadeau: "To think, I've somewhat supported you these past couple years but now you want to open an investigation into migrants taking a free trip to Martha's Vineyard... instead of helping close our borders, instead of our local crime rate, instead of the innocent killings, instead of the drugs pouring into our city, etc. This is a political stunt and you're an embarrassment to our county/city!!"

Debra LeBleu: "Are we going to sue our current administration for the 2 MILLION they've bussed everywhere???"

Victoria Jeronimo: "Please focus on our issues here Mr. Salazar."

Joyce Townsend: "Thank you for stepping up. You are appreciated."

Jpm Property: "Please please be diligent in your attempt to find the truth, the reason and the cause for that evil governor in Florida to do the Despicable act that he did against another human being. Be thorough and fair in your investigation of the Florida governor Ron DeSantis. If it is found that he has done anything illegal I think he should be treated like any other lawbreaker. Even to arrest him with extreme prejudice, we have to show no man is above the law. You can see what happens when people like our past president have broken the law and have not been treated like any other lawbreaker. It gives the momentum to keep breaking the law because they have no fear of extreme prejudice. Extreme prejudice, no fanfare, no press conferences. Just arrest him and make him go through the processes that any other criminal found guilty should do. It makes no sense to investigate if you do not prosecute and jail if your findings are true to his crimes."

Julie Kinzer: "Looks like this "sheriff" is looking to make a name for himself...it's a shame that you picked the wrong side to do that!"

Mary Zippy Fierro McAlpine: "Mr. Salazar, when the President (or whomever decided) to fly plane loads of "migrants" on early morning (0 dark thirty) flights to different parts of the country, did they have a plan for housing, jobs and shelter for them when they landed or did you investigate that, as well? Your selective outrage shows your ignorance and agenda. Get real!"

Gary Johnson: "Do your job. What laws were broken? How about Biden transporting migrants all over the country?"

Mary Beth Klein: "I'm disappointed I voted for you. You're not sure there is a statute he broke, but are investigating it because you don't like it? They all signed consent forms and went voluntarily. Spend your time protecting Texas."

Shawna Price-Theriot: "Just yesterday, I posed the question of who had the guts to call these "leaders" out for trafficking humans. Glad you do. Thanks for giving them a voice."

DIABETES AND VASCULAR DISEASE

YOUR VASCULAR HEALTH

Diabetes Mellitus is a disease that affects the body's ability to absorb glucose, which is a form of sugar and a major source of energy. There are two types of diabetes, Type 1 (formerly known as juvenile diabetes) and Type 2 (formerly called adult onset diabetes).

Both cause high levels of glucose in the blood stream. High blood sugar causes many of the long-term effects of diabetes. Too much sugar in the blood damages the linings of the arteries of all sizes, and that can cause atherosclerosis, in which arteries are weakened and/or clogged with plaque.

GLUCOSE IN THE BLOOD

NORMAL LEVEL

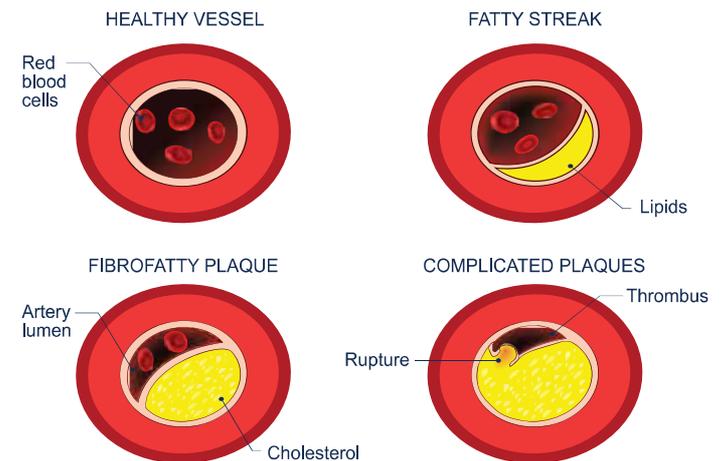

DIABETES

Atherosclerosis in DIABETIC PATIENTS can lead to:

- Kidney damage. Kidneys have tiny blood vessels that remove waste from the blood, but diabetes blocks these blood vessels. As the disease progresses, the kidneys lose function and eventually fail.
- Retinopathy. High blood sugar can cause tiny blood vessels in the eyes to become blocked. When your eye tries to grow new blood vessels, they grow abnormally, eventually leading to blindness.
- Peripheral artery disease. Glucose damage to the arteries that feed oxygen and nutrients to the legs and feet can lead to pain in the legs, foot sores that won't heal, chronic pain from poor circulation and in some cases, amputation.
- Neuropathy. In this condition, the patient loses feeling in the feet and toes. Decreased blood flow caused by clogged arteries can damage the nerves in the extremities.

ATHEROSCLEROSIS

If you or someone in your family has DIABETES, be aware that:

- Patients with diabetes are more likely to get vascular disease.
- Patients with both diabetes and vascular disease are at risk of amputation, blindness, kidney failure and other serious disabilities.

YOUR VASCULAR HEALTH

Treatment Of DIABETES – Know Your A1c

Because of the effects, it is very important to aggressively treat both types of diabetes to minimize long-term damage. Careful maintenance of the blood glucose level is the primary goal of this treatment. The HbA1c is a test that estimates the averaged glucose level over a three-month period. Maintaining an HbA1c < 7% is known to lower the risk of amputation, heart attacks, stroke and onset of peripheral arterial disease.

Avoiding foods and snacks high in sugar (which can include seemingly innocuous items such as white bread and pasta) can help maintain healthy glucose control. In addition, exercise helps to burn energy and improve your body's ability to keep your glucose at a healthy level.

Ultimately, medication is often required to maintain this control. For type 2 diabetes, it has been shown that use of an insulin sensitizing medication (usually an oral agent) dramatically decreases cardiovascular complications compared to using only insulin. Consultation with a diabetes specialist can help you to manage your diabetes optimally. There are many new ways to check your glucose at home, including phone apps, and this knowledge and feedback can help you to manage you A1c better.

Preventive Care

Preventive care is a critical component of limiting lifetime complications for diabetics. Diabetes predisposes one to heart attacks, strokes, kidney failure and peripheral arterial disease. Knowing the signs and symptoms of these can facilitate you seeking help before a tragic event occurs. However, diabetes can also blunt the usual nerve response to diseases such as the pain of peripheral artery disease. This loss of sensation results in an increased risk of pressure ulcers on the feet. Patients with diabetes should perform routine inspection of their feet to evaluate for any breaks in the skin and notify their doctor immediately if found.

Often, nail care can be complicated in diabetic patients. If you have been told you have peripheral neuropathy, ask for a referral to a podiatrist to assist you with nail care to avoid potentially dangerous injuries in nail care. If you do develop any wounds on your feet that do not heal in a reasonable time or seem to be expanding, ask your doctor to refer you to a vascular surgeon.

Jenelle Esparza: A Latina Artist Creating Narrative Through Her Weaving

By Dr. Ricardo Romo

In 2018 Jenelle Esparza experienced an artistic transformational moment when she set aside her training as a photographer, painter, printer, and digital artist to take weaving classes at the Southwest School of Art in San Antonio. Learning to weave came naturally to her. She told Lauren Moya Ford of the online Texas visual arts magazine Glasstire: "It was familiar in a way, like I used to know how to do it, and was just relearning it." The classes paid off. In her 2018 ArtPace Residency, Esparza initiated her first major conceptual woven artwork. Esparza so enjoyed making the large, wall-sized cotton tapestries for the Artpace exhibit that she has now focused completely on weaving as her art practice.

Jenelle Esparza's inclusion in "Artists Looking at Art," a recent exhibit at the McNay Museum of Art, demonstrated an ability to link woven patterns to her Mexican American past. She traced three generations of ancestors on her maternal grandmother's side to cotton farming. Their work as cotton pickers inspired her to weave textiles and reconstruct found objects to tell her ancestral story of hard work, isolation, and exploitation. This artistic narrative resonates with me personally since my parents and four grandparents also worked in the cotton fields of South Texas in their youth.

Esparza grew up in the South Texas community of Corpus Christi. Her artistic father encouraged creative development, and early in her childhood, he gave his daughter a 35mm camera. Upon graduation from high school, she attended Del Mar Community College. Esparza took part-time jobs as a cook to pay for her tuition. Her main focus at Del Mar College lay in the art classes, and when she moved to San Antonio in 2008 to attend the University of Texas-San Antonio she continued to major in art.

Esparza based her decision to remain in San Antonio after finishing her art degree partly because the Alamo city has been cultivating a reputation of being highly receptive to Latino artists. During my years as President of UTSA, I had the opportunity to add more than 2,000 art pieces to UTSA's libraries and office walls, the majority by Latino artists. The City of San Antonio Cultural Arts Program and the University Health System acquired thousands of artworks over the past ten years, including several of her recent weaving pieces. Esparza has also found support for her work from Blue Star and the McNay Contemporary Art Museum, and early in her career she received Grants from the National Association of Latino Arts and Culture [NALAC] as well as a summer Residency from ArtPace.

Young artists like Esparza often have to take many different paths to achieve success in their fields of endeavor. There are demands associated with participating in exhibits and the constant worries of selling one's art. Many graduates of university art programs or art schools start as interns and few encounter well-paying work in the early years. Esparza was fortunate to find an internship and a full-time job with Chuck Mauer, a well-respected photographer in San Antonio. She worked for Mauer's Alternative Ink shop from 2010-2012, then left to pursue freelance work. In 2016 she took a position as Museum Educator, Family Experiences as part of the public education outreach initiative of the McNay Art Museum.

Esparza's weaving is not traditional. She often refers to her creative process as experimental and conceptual. Although she is an admirer of the Navajo and Oaxacan weavers, her style is unique; she designs and weaves her own version of a blanket or rug. At times the work does not even resemble a blanket or rug. She gives deep thought to the narrative she wishes to tell. Her mind is filled with stories connected to her family history and the family's relationships with cotton. Thus, each of her weavings has a narrative behind it. She draws on the stories her father and grandparents told her when she was a young girl.

Esparza has preserved numerous tools related to her family's farming and their ordeals as cotton pickers. She keeps a small plow and several other farming tools that belonged to her grandfather in the small studio behind her home. She has drawings of the notorious short hoe called "el cortito" by cotton workers. The cotton workers hated the short hoe because it required that they bend low to the ground to weed or harvest crops growing only inches from the soil. She has studied the history of "el cortito." She knows that through the efforts of the United Farmworkers Union and farm labor leader, Cesar Chavez, California passed a law banning the short hoe's use in the fields. In her new exhibit at the Kinfolk House in Fort Worth, Esparza connects some of the farm tools with her weavings.

Esparza's role as co-owner of Presa House, an art gallery in Southtown that she operates with her partner, Rigoberto Luna, enables her to promote the artwork of other emerging artists from the region. She is generous in acknowledging Luna's connections with artists and his major role in preparing the Presa House exhibits. In a recent exhibit I attended at Presa House, the Luna-Esparza team showcased the artwork of Latino artists from Albuquerque, New Mexico and San Diego, California.

Glasstire online magazine author, Lauren Moya Ford, commended Esparza for her commitment to finding the "hidden histories of Mexican American, Tejano, and Indigenous narratives in her home region of South Texas." South Texas is full of rich stories of conquest, settlement, and development. Jenelle Esparza's ability to use art to convey some of these narratives makes the observer reflect on the diverse social and economic contributions to Borderlands history.

¡Honor a quien honor merece!

M. Antonieta Gonzalez MD

Esta semana, se celebró la Gala de nuestro periódico, en la que se ha hecho honor y muy bien merecido, a individuos cuyo mérito es indudable. Y a quienes no mencionar en esta pequeña columna, pues ustedes podrán leer acerca de ellos, en otras partes del periódico.

Pero al pensar en quién o quiénes, merecen nuestro reconocimiento...La lista comienza a crecer.

Hace algunos años, fui presidente de la entonces Sociedad Médica Hispana de San Antonio, y decidí que era necesaria una "Noche de Reconocimiento" ¡y sí que lo vi complicado! Así que, aunque fuera humildemente con una placa de mérito de nuestra sociedad, se honró, no solamente al mundialmente famoso inventor del 'cardiac stent' (¡Así es, fue un médico español, en San Antonio, el inventor!). Pero también al reconocido Profesor universitario; Y a colegas que habían pasado muchos años, en lo que yo llamo 'las trincheras de la medicina'; Y a Quijotes que donan su tiempo dinero y esfuerzo, como embajadores de salud a otros lugares más necesitados; Y... la lista creció.

En este país, se hace siempre honor al cuerpo militar. "Gracias por su servicio", descuentos, prioridades, becas de estudios. Pero, aun así, a veces las recompensas se quedan cortas, dado el precio que algunos pagan.

¿Y el cuerpo de Policía? Sobre todo, en estos tiempos en los que no me imagino como pueden funcionar, con la responsabilidad de mantener el orden y nuestra seguridad, en medio de las controversias en que se mueven, y aun con la preocupación de ser vistos como enemigos, en lugar de aliados

¿Y qué hay de los maestros? Muchos de ellos, han pasado casi toda su vida al frente de un salón, cuidando y educando a nuestros hijos, y en alguna forma, ayudando a modelar nuevas generaciones

¿Y qué hay de los/ las abuelos/as y a veces hasta bisabuelos?, Muchos de ellos, a pesar de sus propias limitaciones, hacen frente a la necesidad, que por diferentes razones les convierte en responsables de sus nietos. Y tantas veces tienen que dejar de trabajar, o por el contrario, regresar a trabajar, cuando ya tenían derecho a descansar, para mantener y cuidar a esos pequeños, que no tuvieron la culpa de su situación.

¿Y qué hay de los trabajadores de emergencia 'first responders', que corren hacia el peligro, donde los demás huyen de él?

¿Y que hay de los trabajadores de la construcción? Entes anónimos, que nos permiten viajar en una carretera suave, o vivir en un sitio acogedor; cuando ellos han tenido que trabajar bajo el calcinante calor, o el frío, o la lluvia.

¿Y qué hay de todos esos otros trabajadores? Aquellos que nos permiten llegar a un hogar, o a una oficina limpia, y/o recoger a los niños de un sitio donde sabemos que están seguros y que en ocasiones son la ayuda que permiten a muchos otros individuos poder trabajar en otras tantas áreas.

¿Y qué hay de... tantos héroes anónimos 'unsung heroes'? Para todos ustedes... Me quito el sombrero, y hago una reverencia.

Alamo River Ranch HoldCo, LLC y Alamo River Ranch Operating Company, LLC; Alamo River RV Resort & Campground: Aviso de hallazgo de que no hay impacto significativo

AGENCIA: Servicio Cooperativo de Negocios Rurales, USDA

ACCIÓN: Aviso de hallazgo de no impacto significativo.

RESUMEN: El RBS ha hecho un Hallazgo de No Impacto Significativo (FONSI) con respecto a una solicitud de posible asistencia financiera a Alamo River Ranch HoldCo, LLC y Alamo River Ranch Operating Company, LLC; Alamo River RV Resort & Campground para la construcción de la expansión del resort en el condado de Bexar, Texas.

PARA OBTENER MÁS INFORMACIÓN: Para obtener copias de la evaluación ambiental (EA) y FONSI, o para obtener más información, comuníquese con: Michael Self, Especialista en Negocios y Cooperativas, 101 South Main Street, Temple, Texas 76501, al 254-742-9780 o Michael.Self@USDA.GOV. El EA y el FONSI también están disponibles para revisión pública en USDA Rural Development, Seguin Area Office, 999 Fleming Drive, Seguin, Texas 78155.

INFORMACIÓN COMPLEMENTARIA: El proyecto propuesto consiste en la construcción de un campamento y una expansión del resort en aproximadamente 53 acres cerca de Van Ormy. Está en 12430 Trawalter Lane, Van Ormy, Texas 78073.

Las alternativas consideradas por RBS y Alamo River Ranch HoldCo, LLC y Alamo River Ranch Operating Company, LLC, incluyen: Ninguna acción; otro desarrollo de la tierra. Las alternativas se discuten en el Alamo River RV Resort & Campground Resort EA. El RBS ha revisado y aprobado la EA para el proyecto propuesto.

La disponibilidad del EA para revisión pública se anunció mediante aviso en el siguiente periódico: La Prensa Texas el 24 y 31 de julio de 2022. Un período de comentarios de 14 días fue anunciado en el aviso del periódico. El EA también estuvo disponible para revisión pública en las oficinas de Desarrollo Rural del USDA, así como en Alamo River Ranch HoldCo, LLC y Alamo River Ranch Operating Company, LLC; Oficinas de Alamo River RV Resort & Campground. No se recibieron comentarios.

Basado en su EA, los compromisos asumidos por Alamo River Ranch HoldCo, LLC y Alamo River Ranch Operating Company, LLC; Alamo River RV Resort & Campground, y los comentarios públicos recibidos, RBS ha concluido que el proyecto no tendría un impacto significativo (o ningún impacto) en la calidad del agua, los humedales, las llanuras aluviales, el uso de la tierra, la estética, el transporte o la salud y seguridad humanas.

El proyecto propuesto no tendrá ningún efecto adverso en los recursos enumerados o elegibles para su inclusión en el Registro Nacional de Lugares Históricos. La Agencia también ha llegado a la conclusión de que no es probable que el proyecto propuesto afecte a las especies amenazadas y en peligro de extinción incluidas en la lista federal o al hábitat crítico designado de las mismas. El proyecto propuesto no afectaría de manera desproporcionada a las poblaciones minoritarias y/o de bajos ingresos.

No se han identificado otros posibles impactos significativos resultantes del proyecto propuesto. Por lo tanto, RBS ha determinado que este FONSI cumple con sus obligaciones bajo la Ley Nacional de Política Ambiental, según enmendada (42 U.S.C. 4321 y siguientes), el Consejo de Regulaciones de Calidad Ambiental (40 CFR §§ 1500-1508) y las Políticas y Procedimientos Ambientales de Desarrollo Rural del USDA (7 CFR Parte 1970) para su acción relacionada con el proyecto.

RBS está satisfecho de que los impactos ambientales del proyecto propuesto se hayan abordado adecuadamente. La acción federal de RBS no resultaría en impactos significativos en la calidad del medio ambiente humano, y como tal, no preparará una Declaración de Impacto Ambiental para su acción relacionada con el proyecto propuesto.
